Southern Correspondence. CITY OF MEXICO, DEC. 28d, 1875.

We arrived in Havana, making good time on Tuesday, Dec. 2, at 12 o'clock. As usual there was trouble about allowing passengers "in transit" to go ashore. Our names and application to go ashore was sent to the Comandant at 1 o'clock, but for some reason, we were not allowed to go ashore until the following morning. Havana has not changed one partiele since I first saw it 7 years ago. I don't it was, Mr. Van Houten received some painful think it has changed for 200 years. It is the same dirty city, streets so narrow, that they are covered by one awning, sidewalks so narrow that only one person can walk on them. Although in December, it was very warm, the sumption, when a single bottle of Hale's Honyellow fever still prevailing. I only found their cigars, cigarettes and guava jelly cheap enough to buy. Everything ele, such as linen goods, in fact all imported goods, formerly so cheap, are now much higher than in New York. The harbor of Havana, although entirely surrounded by of Havana, falthough entirely surrounded by used in this neighborhood for the past two or hills, is not good. The bottom does not allow the three years without a single failure to cure. If auchor to hold, and during their heavy northers ships often drag their anchors and collisions occur. A CARD. MR. EDITOR.—Having seen in THE RECORD of last week an item reporting the civil case of Lyon agt. FOR ANY AMOUNT, AT THE LOWEST RATES. Murden, and thinking from my name being thus brought before the public as a non-paying and disputing debtor, that wrong impressions may go abroad, I wish to make a brief statement of the affair to correct any such misapprenensions. I have always made it a matter of pride to pay promptly and cheerfully all just bills presented against me. This account of Lyon's. I believe, is the only bill I have disputed and refused to pay since I came to Bloomfield. As I stated on oath. this publisher agreed to insert my advertisement for $20 per year and afterwards went back upon his word and demanded payment from me at the rate of $40 a year. True, he denied under oath, positively, this $20 agreement. On that point I will only remark that upon his cross-examination he retreated from his sworn position and admitted that he sometimes did vary his rates of advertising. Perhaps he reflected that there were in this town too many persons who know from their experience with him that it was his favorite habit to ask one price at the start and then bring in a bill for double the amount agreed on when pay-day came around.

I make this statement as a duty I owe the public, loping a ventilation of the facts will rebuke this exfortioner, and discourage him from prosecuting other people against whom he may also venture to trump up fictitious claims of indebtedness. S. A. MURDEN.
